INDIA’S POTENTIAL AS TEXTILE SOURCING HUB FOR GLOBAL BRANDS

Dr. Ranjeet Mehta

India enjoys a unique advantage of having abundant raw materials and presence of manufacturing in all segments of the textile value chain but it’s yet to become the most favored destination for sourcing by International Brands. The Textile & Apparel industry is one of the largest and the most important sectors for the Indian economy in terms of output, foreign exchange earnings and employment. It also provides direct employment to over 45 million people and is the second largest provider of employment after agriculture. As per the WTO in its World Trade Statistical Review 2018, India is ranked as 5th largest exporter of Ready Made Garments (RMG) in the world. Given that Ready Made Garments manufacturing units can be viable at all size levels, particularly because of low cost of plant and machinery, the units range from small to large. Consequently, the RMG sector continues to be dominated by unorganized players. However, the branded apparel market has made inroads in the past few years.

The decentralized power looms and knitting sector forms the largest section of the textile sector. The major sub-sectors that comprise the textile sector include the organized cotton/mannmade fiber textile mill industry, the manmade fiber/flament yarn industry, the wool & woollen textile industry, the sericulture and silk textiles industry, handlooms, the jute & jute textiles industry, and textiles exports. As per the data, Indian Textile industry is one of the largest in the world with a large raw material base and manufacturing strength across the value chain. India is the largest producer and the second largest exporter of cotton in the world. India is also the leading consumer of cotton. Domestic Textile and apparel industry contributes 2% to India’s GDP and accounts for 14% of industrial production, 27% of the country’s foreign exchange inflows and 13% of country’s export earnings with huge potential to grow. This sector is all the more important because it’s dominated by women workers, with 70% of the workforce being women. To me this is one sector which can uplift rural women from abject poverty and also goes with the empowering women in the larger interest of India. If we look closely, the Indian textile and apparel sector, the sub sectors of weaving, processing and garmenting have fragmented and tackling the requisite scale for success in global markets. Most of the manufacturing units have small capacities and low manufacturing efficiencies which make it difficult for them to compete in global markets. At 50% of world production, India is the largest producer of raw jute and jute

Give more attention to the areas in which you find yourself weak. Human beings are not computers in which everything is programmed and standardized. So it is alright if we’re weak in few areas and strong in other areas. The most important thing is to overcome this weakness and turn this too in your list of strengths. The standard curriculum which we pursue in school and college rarely includes a major part of tests which we are expected to attempt in a competitive examination of banking, insurance etc. So, if a fresher just out of college finds initial discomfort while going through questions of reasoning, quantitative aptitude etc., there is nothing unusual about it. However one should appreciate the fact that if we really want to succeed in the competition, we’ve to learn, practice and possibly master what is expected to be asked in the examination. In our country English and Mathematics are weak spots for many. So a bunch of such aspirants should do everything to fix this weakness. Again you’ve to customise your preparation according to the requirements of the examination. On a lighter note you don’t need to be a Shakespeare for English or a Ramanujam for Mathematics. It is also possible that one finds weakness only in certain particular areas of a subject. For example in English one may be confused about the use of articles (a, an, the) or may face difficulty with regard to tenses. The need is to be aware of the topics where you need more preparation. Your allocation of time should be in accordance to that.

Initial focus on qualifying in preliminary examination: When you apply for a competitive examination which has more than one part you have to adopt an strategy which is slightly different from the one adopted for a single phase examination. Of course, in both the cases your objective is to come out as a winner.

For RRBs and PSBs, as the so called written examination is divided in two stages, you need to make sure that you qualify in both the examination, but as we know unless you’re not in the merit list of preliminary examination, you’re not get to appear in the main examination and in case of officers one will be called for interview only after qualifying in both preliminary and goods in the world. The Mill sector, with 3,400 textile mills having installed capacity of more than 50 million spindles and 842,000 rotors is the second largest in the world. As far as cotton is concerned, India is the second largest producer and exporter of cotton in the world at $6.3 billion, marginally close to China. India has emerged as the largest producer of cotton in the world with the production of 345 lakh bales in 2016-17, the second largest exporter after China. Currently, the cotton industry is sustaining livelihoods of 5.8 million farmers and 40-50 million people engaged in other activities like processing and trading.

Silk which is one of the most important parts of textile value chain, India is the second largest producer of silk in the world, producing around 18 per cent of the world’s total silk. Mulberry, Eri, Tasar, and Muga are the main types of silk produced in the country. It is a labor-intensive sector. In India, textiles have evolved over a period of thousand years. They are important for their attachment with the culture, which has been shaping Indian societies for hundreds of years. The history of the textiles dates back to the period when the Indian subcontinent did business with Kabul, the Balkans and the European countries.

The domestic demand for textiles is likely to remain robust from end-user segments, supported by a strong rise in private consumption expenditure during the rest of FY19. We have seen in past few years that there have been serious efforts and measures taken by the government like allowing 100 per cent FDI in Technology Upgradation Fund Scheme to accelerate textile industry’s growth. But the industry needs to take initiatives to focus on innovation and value addition for improving global competitiveness. We have to come up with innovative and exclusive products if we desire to expand our footprint in the global market. The continued growth and global competitiveness of the textiles industry can drive the economy to new heights.

Most of the international brands like Marks & Spencer, JC penny, and Gap acquired major portion of their fabrics from India. According to the report, the Indian Textile Industry covers 61 per cent of the international textile market and over 20 per cent of the global market. The domestic demand for textiles is likely to remain robust from end-user segments, supported by a strong rise in private consumption expenditure di exportY nations, as per India Ratings and Research. The rating agency has maintained a stable outlook for the cotton and synthetic textiles for FY19. It is expected that the overall credit profile of the sector will remain improved. As of now, it looks that the sector profitability is likely to improve gradually, with players putting on increased raw material prices to end-users, given the healthy demand, a depreciating rupee and waning impact of the structural issues. However, the positive impact of improved demand and profitability may be partly countered by sticky working capital requirements also.

One of the critical areas where the sector needs to improve is the supply chains and internal systems, focus on research and development, cost optimization (saving cost by vertical integration, etc.) and scaling-up to achieve greater competitiveness and command a higher share in the production and export of top items traded in global markets. We have seen in recent past that India’s export performance has not been up to our expectations for a variety of reasons. It cannot be business as usual and the industry has to rise to the occasion and ensure that the share of India’s production increases by diversification in products and explore new markets.

Immediate steps that need to be taken by industry are to discard outdated technologies and modernize its machinery to be globally competitive. Over the last few decades, the textile industry has seen a facelift globally. Although the original machines and their processes are still being used, they have evolved into more technologically-advanced versions of the sections. Now that the machines that used to be worked manually by skilled laborers can be computerized and programmed to make the needed fabric. There have been innovations like later printing on paper, textile machines have been made to create non-ironed suits, jeans and shirts. Designs are created on material more quickly and are more precise. Layered printing has also been translated into clothing, which helps in designs make more complex. Although mostly found only in the high fashion community right now, 3D-printing is now being used to create clothing. Companies like Nike are finding ways to use this technology to make innovative shoes. The hope is that the future 3D-printing will be printed on thinner and resilient fibers to make actual, soft clothing. Nanotechnology is the new innovation and is still in the beginning stages. The textile industry is looking to use nanotechnology to create more durable water-repellent, self-cleaning, and fire-resistant items. Nanotechnology will also allow the textile industry to make products at lower energy thresholds, which helps to sustain the environment.

Quality has to be the mainstay for India to sustain exports in the textile market especially when we are facing stiff competition from countries like Bangladesh and Vietnam. With rising income levels, steady growth of the retail industry, the textile sector is expected to experience a high growth trajectory in future due to strong domestic consumption as well as increasing demand in global markets.

Business leaders across the world have India in their sights. Several major international apparel and manufacturing players have invested in India already. These include textile machinery manufacturers Rieter and Trutzschler, and vertically integrated fashion brands like Zara and Mango (Spain), Promod (France), Benetton (Italy), Esprit, Levi’s and Forever 21 (USA). Affordability and raw material and labour, great strides in textile technology could together make India not only a preferred but a formidable destination for foreign investment in the textile and garment business. From the standpoint of the luxury fashion sector, it is particularly interesting that is the other half of India’s textile story is about handlooms, a subsector which could play a big role in forging the global luxury industry ahead. Industry’s focus should be to recreate the inherent talent of Indian weavers which has been dying out and forefront, tricking down to everyday wear.

A growing economy, rising disposable income and the growing aspirations of Indian consumers is expected to drive growth in the Indian Textile & Apparels industry. Also, it uses different materials such as bamboo, wood, wool, silk, linen, jute, cotton, and synthetic fibres. We must remember that how Khadi, a handspun fabric that became Ghandi’s trademark, making India self-sufficient during the British Era. It is a tour de force in the textile sector, providing the perfect context for a meaningful discussion, at least in the beginning. It narrates a universal tale of how a handmade fabric can find heart-touching reference in today’s high-tech and fastest global fashion industry. All stakeholders must continue making their sustained efforts to effectively position India as the major textile source, textile items ranging from raw materials to finished products and handicrafts for the Global Market. It is about the time for our textile industry to inculcate and sustainable economic growth but also facilitate inclusive and sustainable economic growth by empowering women entrepreneurs. EN 13/98
Developing contemporary technologies signifies challenge: CSIR chief

Employment News caught up with Dr. G. Madhava Nand, a renowned Scientist of the country. He heads the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR), New Delhi as its Director General.

Tell us about the pivotal role CSIR has played in the field of scientific and industrial research in the past 2-3 decades.

You have said past 2-3 decades, but let me take the liberty of starting from the beginning. So when we became independent in 1947, we were not self reliant in anything. We were importing food, we were importing clothing and everything was brought from outside and one of the major challenges before the nation was how to become self reliant in every aspect of our life and CSIR activating a lot of work looking into that objective from the very beginning. And one of the first achievements of CSIR was how to empower every citizen of the country and that is how the salt linked in elections is a technology given by CSIR to Mysore Inks. CSIR participated very significantly in the 1960s in the Green revolution. The entire mechanisation of agriculture was spearheaded by CSIR labs including developing the first indigenous, low-sensitivity, low-cost, blue light photosensitive film which was developed in our Durgapur Laboratory. We also developed many pesticides etc. Subsequently, from 1970s to 1990s was an era of technology denial by the world to India. So we had to develop the technology indigenously by reverse engineering.

Tell us about the contribution of CSIR to the healthcare sector.

Way back in the 1970s and 80s when new diseases such as AIDS were emerging, the first medicine which became available for HIV therapy was extraordinarily expensive, no Indian company could afford it. We also had people in Africa and sub-Saharan countries. CSIR reverse engineered some of these chemicals made it 1000 times cheaper. The World Health Organisation mandated that medicines be produced in India and Cipla took the technology from us. We are very proud that we are a part of the Indian community and catalysed another revolution in India, which is the generic pharma industry. So the beginning of generic pharma industry was the direct contribution of CSIR.

Let us talk about other important sectors where CSIR has made significant contributions.

Today, we live in a globalised world and our challenge is how to develop technologies which are contemporary and which can actually stand up to the rest of development, a 10 seater aircraft would have noticed that we are actually developing a plenty of new things in the last 10 years. If you would have noticed last couple of seasons, you do not see many flight delays in Delhi airport, unlike in the past. One of Institute of Petroleum in major airports in the country including Delhi airport is the system called DRISHTI which is a transmissiometer, which measures the dirt that is in the airport before the aircraft lands and the information is available to the pilots online. DRISHTI technology is contemporary and is the best in the world and our competitors are from western Europe and our technology is as good as that but much cheaper about 1/5th of that cost.

The road from laboratory to industry seems to be very long. At times, you get to know of innovations which have been created in the lab but never sees the light of the day. It never becomes commercially viable and successful. Why is that? That is because of the technology Readiness Level or TRL. It was proposed by NASA several years ago that TRL 1, 2, 3 are essentially very early prototypes worked out in the lab. TRL 7, 8 and 9 is the highest level and TRL 9 is when it is ready to be deployed in the field at the very large scale. In between there is a gap and that gap typical in academic labs, is what we call as the translational research, which is not that easy to fill up because we have to show the scalability of the product, you have to make the prototypes, we have to make sure that those prototypes work in the lab and then to scale them up to fill up. There are many ways of filling this gap up, one of the ways of filling the gap up is industries and academia work very closely and then scale up and demonstrate on the field.

But the industry is more concerned about ROI, return on investment and profits. Isn’t it?

Yes, that’s the problem lies. Industry are many times not willing to come in the early phase of discovery. One of the powerful way of doing this is through the means of start-ups. There is big revolution of start-ups in India, who are the ones who can take up the challenge of filling this gap. Taking the technology from TRL 3 to TRL 7 and this is what start-ups do and that is another direction where we believe that there is potential, but we also see, in the last 5 years a major revolution has taken place with the Start-up movement and Start-up India is a part of that.

One of the pressing issues is lack of alternative to fossil fuel. Although, a lot work has been done as far as electric vehicle are concerned but still we have very commercially viable electric cars. Is CSIR working towards that.

There are two issues of reducing our dependency on fossil fuel. First is that energy is derived from crops; you know it is most common but there are many different crops which can give you fuel and we have already demonstrated technology on this, when you saw on 26th January this year in the Republic day parade, Air Force flew a DRISHTI AN-32, which flew on Jathropa fuel which were developed by our Dhradun Lab. The second way of addressing it is our work towards that in Kairaikudi in Tamil Nadu. The lab is making batteries for electric vehicles. They have ambitious plans which we would be unveiling in the next few months.

The Govt has ambitious plan of housing for all by 2022. The housing sector probably needs a revolution like the mobile phone revolution. Is CSIR looking at cost effective housing material.

There are two laboratories working in the housing sector. One is the Central Building Research Institute (CBRI), Roorkee and the other is Structural Research Centre, Delhi. Both of them have been deeply involved not only in India but also in neighbouring countries in arriving at affordable housing for 21st century which is affordable in urban areas. The labs are looking at prefabricated housing but stable structure. The CBRI lab has submitted a project to the Govt for making a house which has been made in the lab, which we call the Aroma mission which I mentioned is a part of that particular effort. We will not be able to reach the society unless we go in to the last corner of society. We do not have the wherewithal to take the technologies ourselves to the field, we will have to partner the industries. All the work that we do in CSIR is very industry oriented.

Many of the large corporate have taken technology from us. There are many success stories which we can talk about. Amul milk powder is our technology, Tata iodised salt, Tata Swatch and many more. We also work with small and medium enterprises. We are part of an ecosystem which is leading towards a society to promote innovation and technology transformation. They also become our vehicles to reach the society. Another important aspect is that any technology has to be backed up by very strong science and therefore CSIR labs do very deep science. Mahatma Gandhi gave to the world a unique tool to promote social cohesiveness and solidarity amongst individuals and groups. In the 150th birth anniversary of the Mahatma, it would be pertinent to critically understand the elements of this tool, nonviolent communication and put it into practice in our daily lives. When the overarching aim of our society is to bring together people from different backgrounds and communities in the march towards nation building, nonviolent communication is the glue that helps in the soul exchanges, empathetic relationship, compassion and mutual respect. If introduced at different levels of education and learnings, more and more people can integrate the different elements of nonviolent communication and it would contribute towards a more responsible and compassionate citizen.

The essence of nonviolent communication is Mahatma Gandhi's five pillars of nonviolence: respect, understanding, non-domination, non-judgement and compassion. Once we start following these foundational attributes of nonviolence, we can start cultivating it and experience on personal, inter-personal and inter-divisional level which is a difference not only within ourselves but in the society at large. Arun Gandhi, the grandson of Mahatma Gandhi, aptly explains the five pillars of nonviolence in his book, The Gift of Ancestral Wisdom.

"Respect and understanding of other people, whatever their religion, race, caste, or country, is the only way the world can go forward. We shall have to understand the divisions always backfiring in the end, leading to anger, rebellion, and violence. In contrast, when we respect someone regardless of whether he or she, we naturally evolve to that third pillar, acceptance. The ability to accept other views and positions would allow us to grow stronger and wiser. The other two pillars of nonviolence—appreciation and compassion—hold the key to our personal happiness and fulfillment as well as greater harmony in the world."

The Gandhian approach to nonviolent communication has been explained by Robert Bode. In his article, Robert Bode explains the Gandhian approach to nonviolent communication. He says this approach includes four aspects: these include:(1) nonviolent communication (2) maintenance of relationships and enrichment of personhood; (3) openness; and (4) flexibility. According to Bode: "The goal of nonviolent communication was to build and maintain human relationships and thus enhance personhood. Gandhi's insistence on nonviolence recognized the importance of others, valued humanity, and appreciated the importance of human relationships and personhood. Gandhi's nonviolent communication theory included the valuing of others, valued humanity, and promoted nonviolence above all. But he also stressed the importance of individual relationships and friendships. Nonviolence was manifested in Gandhi's rhetoric and is a characteristic of his nonviolent communication theory. For Gandhi, openness included communication practices such as free speech and press, public discussion, and direct negotiation." Bapu's writings and his action are the guiding post of nonviolent communication. For instance, in Harjian, he wrote: "My writings cannot be poisonous, they must be free from anger, for it is my special religious conviction that no one can truly attain our goal by promoting ill will. There cannot be room for untruth in my writings, because it is my unshakable belief that there is no religion other than truth. My writings cannot but be free from hate toward others because it is my firm belief that it is love that sustains earth."

Mahatma Gandhi was an avid letter writer. The role of letter writing in the evolution of nonviolent communication has been encapsulated by Gandhi himself. He writes in his autobiography, "For me it became a means for the study of human nature in all its casts and shades, as I always aimed at establishing an intimate and clean bond between the editor and the readers. I was inundated with letters containing the outpourings of my correspondents' hearts. They were friendly, critical or bitter, according to the temper of the writer. It was a fine education for me to study, digest and answer all this correspondence. It was as though the community thought audibly through this correspondence with me. It made me thoroughly understand the responsibility of a journalist, and the hold I secured in this way over the community made the future campaign workable, dignified and irresistible."

For greater understanding of nonviolent communication, it would be pertinent to familiarize ourselves on what nonviolent communication really means. Senior Gandhian, Natvar Thakkar gave a nuanced importance of nonviolent communication. For greater understanding of nonviolent communication, he talks about the importance of nonviolent communication. For quick reference, it would be useful delineate the different elements of nonviolent communication. These include: Completing the sentences in the way we communicate with others- be it verbal, nonverbal, our thoughts and ideas. ii. We should learn to communicate with ourselves and self-introspection. iii. Use of appropriate and positive language. iv. Expansion of our emotional vocabulary. v. Avoiding stereotypes in our communication efforts. vi. Avoid moralistic judgements. vii. Avoid cruel and evaluative language. viii. Avoid being aggressive. ix. Role of mutual respect in communication. x. Power of empathy. xii. Empathetic communication helps us understand others point of views. xi. Strong belief in the power of mutual respect. xiii. Connecting with needs of others. xiv. Importance of flexibility in our communication efforts. xiii. Practicing deep and empathetic listening skills. xiv. Expressing gratitude in our communication efforts.

In the context of the above elements, it can be argued that by using the tool kits of nonviolent communication we can practice humanism at all times of our lives, it will help us to act humanely even at most challenging situations. As our emotional vocabulary expands, we will start revisiting on how we express ourselves and listen to others. We will get into the habit of asking questions, creating connections and become more self-aware. In today's world, where differences of opinions are frequent causes of conflicts, developing empathetic connections is critical. Gandhi had aptly said, "Three-fourths of the miseries and misunderstandings in the world will disappear, if we step into the shoes of our adversaries and understand their standpoint. We will then agree with Jiddu Krishnamurti had said, "The ability to observe without evaluating is the highest form of intelligence. To truly observe, nonviolent communication enables us to do."

Myra Walden a trainer in nonviolent communication, talks about the importance of nonviolent communication. "Many of us have been brought up in environments where competition, judgmental demands and criticism are the communicative norm; at best these habitual ways of thinking and speaking hinder communication and create misunderstanding and frustration. Nonviolence helps us to release and transform our innermost patterns. Even worse, they cause anger and pain and may even lead to violence. Even with the best intentions, we can generate conflict because even the idea of nonviolent communication... begins by assuming we are all compassionate by nature and those violent strategies, whether verbal or physical, are learned behaviours, supported by the prevailing culture. Nonviolent communication allows people learn how to communicate effectively with each other so that their lives and relationships are transformed."

Finally, all of us like to take healthy food for our nourishment and health. Unhealthy food makes us sick. Similarly, all of us need healthy communication in our society. Polluted air makes us depressed and can be the cause of various diseases. Communication like food is also equally important. As we cannot communicate and it is part of our existence, it is significant that we introduce the concept of nonviolent communication which will nourish us. Many times, we indulge in unhealthy communication. Our ego, arrogance, antipathy, and superiority, differences with others, our own life conditions and many other reasons could be reasons on why we practice unhealthy communication. We don't have the patience to listen to others, we are not self-aware enough, and knowing or unknowingly practice unhealthy communication. The communication should be able to plug the gap of happiness inequality and contribute to the nurturing of positive emotions. Hence it for all these reasons, teaching the art and science of nonviolent communication should be introduced in all our institutions. Right from primary level to the professional level, in different forms of governance structure, integration of nonviolent communication will lead to a more peaceful and happy navigation and contribute to social cohesion and solidarity. To conclude, it would be apt to say that the goal of nonviolent communication in our daily lives: "Words have both the power to destroy and the power to build up. Words are both true and kind, they can change our world."

main examination. Your comprehensive preparation will cover all the sections included in preliminary and main examination, nevertheless you'll do well if a couple of weeks before you focus entirely on the sections included in preliminary examination. There have been cases of candidates who worked very hard and could've qualified in main examination, but didn't fare well enough to make to the merit list of preliminary examination. You need strategic preparation, not just preparation. It's good that in the preliminary examination, candidates are administered just two sections. Also to relaunch your preparation for the main examination, you better don't wait till the results of first examination are announced. It will be in your own interest not to loose any time.

Applying for multiple (more than one) positions: Many candidates are in dilemma if they should apply for just one position or should try for more than one position. To clarify a situation is explained. Miss A is a graduate and by virtue of her qualification, she is eligible to appear in civil services as well as in all of the four banking examination (clerk and officer in RRBs and for the same positions in PSBs). If she is only keen to become an IAS officer, she won't have to worry if she applies for just one position. But if she is only keen to become an IAS officer and also become a bank employee, she will have to apply to Union Public Service at attractive. He doesn't have to wait till the results of first examination, you better don't apply for just one position (than one) positions:

On the other side, there are candidates who will fill a single application for a particular position in only one set of banks. In this process you'll be required to make four applications. Except for those who have strong reasons to not follow the above, this recommendation may be worth while taking into consideration the following:
- The fee you pay for 4 examinations is not much compared to increase in possibilities of selection, if you prepare well.
- The test pattern is largely similar for clerical and officers position, so the candidate is not required to make separate preparation. You have to make only some additional preparation and work with different set of questions as the difficulty level may be somewhat higher in case of test for officers. All said and done you've to make an integrated preparation.
- In comparison to many other organizations, promotion is easier in RRBs and PSBs. So even if you join as a clerk, you may look forward to getting promoted as an officer. In many PSBs now promotion from clerical to officers' cadre is happening within 2-3 years. Once you are promoted from bank to bank depending on vacancies and other policies. One wise step would be to pass the associate examination of the Indian Institute of Banking and Finance as early as possible after you join a bank. For this qualification additional marks are allotted in the promotion process. You get extra increments also. If one is keen to become officer earlier, the option to apply in the next selection process of IBPS is always available while working. There have been large number of cases of young people joining a bank as clerk and then becoming an officer in the same or other bank, by qualifying in the new process that followed.

Preparation before the test

Depending on the time available to you on daily/weekly basis, you should formulate your strategy for preparation. Some key points about test preparation are:
- Understand the style and pattern of questions in different segments, (2) finding ways to solve them and (3) practice. Along with this you have to make yourself better equipped in terms of knowledge for succeeding in the test. To illustrate, for general awareness, financial awareness, banking and computer you’ve to take help of general knowledge books, magazines and other material. For language papers you need to refer to the grammar part, idioms and phrases etc. There are also examination pattern in the market covering all tests. You may take one or two such guides. Many competitive magazines (mostly published monthly) provide problems and questions from previous examinations. Studying these closely will benefit you. In case of solved papers, you may attempt the questions without looking at answers and then check how you have fared. Also there are practice books available. If some of your friends or acquaintances are also to appear in the exam, such resources can be shared with them. With planned group study you get benefitted and keep yourself inspired.

Using web resources

Today’s tech-savvy generation keeps exploring web contents. If you search on internet, you’ll find ample material which can help you in your test preparation. Test pattern, test analysis, sample papers, guidance to navigate the test; all these can be found. You’ve to be a little discreet in your search and separate wheat from the chaff.

Needless to add that it is necessary to make a preparation schedule and follow that.

Strategy during the test

In case of multiple choice question, as we all know, out of the 4-5 given choices, only one matches the required answer and we have to identify that. There are two distinct approaches can be possible-one is selection and the other is elimination. In questions where you are sure of the one option which is correct, you may easily mark your choice. Otherwise you should adopt the approach of elimination. Options about which you are sure that these are not the right one should be kept aside and final choice should be made from the remaining answers. Even if you decide to randomly mark the answer, when you find that there is not enough time to deliberate on remaining questions, you should make your choice after leaving out least possible answers.

It is very important to read the question right to know how to answer it. Since the time given is limited, it will be good if you can understand the question in one reading only. Also you should use your keyboard skills to the fullest by using minimum time in clicking at the chosen option or moving from one question to other or changing your answer, where you decide to do so, etc.

It has been found that a large number of candidates are not able to attempt all the questions. Their time gets over before reaching the last question. The sad part of this situation, for a candidate is missing out some of those questions in which she could have easily scored. So when you find that lot many questions are remaining and time is running out, don’t get particular questions, leave them and move forward. At the end if you’re left with time, you may come back to the earlier question(s).

Nonetheless that the answers would be obvious. This may happen with only few questions. You should be ready to do the mental exercise of solving the right option.

As there are large number of vacancies available in banks, your chances of success would also be obviously higher, just that you have to work hard to prepare well. If you’re eligible and are interested in a banking career, turn your gear on for the forthcoming examinations.

Comparing oneself with others is a human psychology. While comparing with others what we forget is one of the basic genetic facts of Homo sapiens that no two persons out of nearly 8 billion of world population can have exactly the same chromosomes. All people differ in genes, the basic unit of heredity. Each individual on this earth is unique in his or her capacity, calibre and nature. Each has been gifted with discreet specialization of human traits and talents which none on the earth can excel and master over. Then how can we dare compare the performance of the two examinees on the common papers? You must realize and respect the inherent natural differences of each individual and stop painstaking upon finding others better than yourself in some areas which you feel incapable in.

Education has deeper meaning in human life.

Human life is the by-product of circumstances and the forces beyond our control - there is no denying to that fact. What it does mean that sometimes we do not get the results in the proportion of the labour done and struggle suffered. This paradox of life has been interpreted differently by different people - some say it the divine game of fate, some say it as the natural cycle of sorrow and happiness and still for many of us it is quite the greatest mystic, whimsical. But it does never mean that one should quit and surrender oneself to the unseen and uncontrollable forces of the providence.

The great scientist Albert Einstein once had said that the real education is not the matter of what is written on the pages of a book but what ultimately remains rest in our memory once we come out of the classrooms. This is the very memory which can be called as the corner stone of the future. This is the very memory which we need to take care of and be concerned with. Knowledge is important but more than that what is vital is adopting the pragmatic approach to solve the various challenges of life and mastering the life-saving skills.

In fact, the present examination system which tests the memory retention capacity of a student is nothing more than a modus operandi of memory recall. Each student has his own capacity of cramming the datas, facts and figures. Each student has his or her own level of intelligence and different sorts of bent of mind in this world. Amid so many differences in the various parameters of excellence such as intelligence quotients and inclination of students, it is not simply unfair to expect achievement of the same trajectory of percent of marks and grade from all who write the papers? You must realize and respect the inherent natural differences of each individual and stop painstaking upon finding others better than yourself in some areas which you feel incapable in.

Education in our country is traditionally supposed to be the medium of a bright career as well as means of lucrative job opportunities, but sometimes these assumptions do not stand true. Below are given some of the examples which prove that you might or might not know unless you have read about them in various books and magazines or have heard of somewhere, who rose to the apex of their professional careers which they chose with no guidance from the career counsellors around them, and all the more, with no certificate of high marks and excellent grades.

They were all alone yet made epoch-making changes and historical contributions to the mankind. They were the self-made people, they were the self-taught people, self-motivated people and, most importantly, exceptionally self-confident people who earned avalanche of fame and fortune which they had not ever thought of even in their wildest dreams.

Always remember race does not count... only finale counts.

There is a very motivating anecdote. In a sleepless chase race, an athlete kept on running faster and faster than his competitors and kept himself well ahead of the rest of the sprinters. But in the final round he was unfortunately nowhere in the camera. The cameramen captured the so-called early racers surprisingly gasping somewhere behind many of the competitors. So what makes most important in a competition is not only doing best in the preliminary stages but sustaining the lead until the destination is reached, until the result is yours and finale announces your name as the winner. Gautama Buddha once had said it was better to conquer oneself than to win a thousand battles. Conquering oneself means overcoming one's weaknesses and consistently strengthening oneself. It also means getting enlightened and experienced. It also means persistently learning and enriching oneself with the life's experiences and ups and downs of facing the human being.

It is often said that the world is your oyster. Literally, it means you can achieve anything which you die for and which you dream in your life. It is also said that destiny of all the people in this earth is shaped by what they think of about themselves. So, it is also necessary to guard against your negative thoughts, regressive, pessimistic and frustrating ideas which are born once you fail. If you halt your progress and stop moving ahead on your path with the very first failure of your life, it means you are strangulating your own splendidly bright future with your own hands that could have been used to make your life remarkably more meaningful and fulfilling.

The epics of all religions across the nations bear the message that when things seem to have not been going smoothly or not moving on expected lines we need to better learn them to the Almighty God. Life has been a puzzle and do not try to unravel it as per your interpretation and convenience. Accept the challenges of life bravely as well as patiently and keep trying to get what you have set your eyes upon. Do not give in to the early setbacks. Let not any hardships and obstacles impede your march onto the path of fulfilling your dreams. Take the challenges and predicaments of life as the springboard for turning the somersaults into the oceans of what we may call the gems of life, dreams of life, and the preferred destination of life.
