THE IMPACT OF INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION ON INDIA'S LABOUR POLICIES

Asoke Mukerji
Ambassador (Retd.)

One of the important areas for India's international cooperation is her "demographic dividend": The availability of a huge pool of skilled labour in India till the middle of the 21st century is one factor that will lead to the transformation of India into a global economy. Three international organizations have played a big role in the evolution of India's labour policies. These are the International Labour Organization (ILO), in which India has been active in setting labour standards, the United Nations (UN), in which India has focused setting labour standards, the United Nations (UN), in which India has been active in

The ILO

A century ago, on 28 June 1919, India signed the Treaty of Versailles in France, which brought the First World War to an end. Articles 1-30 of the Treaty created the world’s first international inter-governmental organization, the League of Nations, which was succeeded by the UN in June 1945. Articles 387-427 of the Treaty established the ILO. As a signatory of the Treaty of Versailles, India automatically became a founder member of both the League of Nations and the ILO. Today, the ILO is a Specialized Agency of the UN, and has 187 member-states.

The primary objective of the ILO is to regulate labour policy at the international level. There are four areas where the ILO impacts on labour policies: (i) promotion and implementation of labour standards and fundamental principles and rights at work; (ii) creating opportunities for men and women to obtain decent work and pay; (iii) increasing the scope of social protection for all; and (iv) strengthening the tripartite nature of participation and social dialogue in the organization.

The ILO has a tripartite structure bringing together governments, employers and workers. A Governing Council of 56 representatives (28 governments, 14 employers and 14 workers) meets three times a year (in March, June and November) to take decisions on ILO policy. Since the first reform of the ILO in 1922, India has been permanently represented among the 10 governments of countries of "chief industrial importance", including the United States, United Kingdom, France, China and Russia, (the five permanent members of the UN Security Council), have a veto in the adoption of decisions by the Governing Council. The other four countries of "chief industrial importance" permanently represented in the Governing Council are Brazil, Germany, Italy and

CAREER IN MANAGEMENT

Arti S

Management and manager are familiar terms for us. All of us have to do the job of managing even though we may not be designated as managers. Here we're talking of managing our household, studies, finances and various situations we're put into or create for ourselves. Proper management makes things easier for us and helps us navigate smoothly in life. Besides this, management can also be made a career option. The important thing to note is that even without a professional qualification in management, one can get opportunities to work as a manager. In government departments, banks and many other public and private organizations, you'll find employees designated as manager (of the unit/branch or a section/division thereof) who have not studied management as a subject. Such people are in those work units which have not mandated management degree a objectives, the role of labour in achieving freedom of association. Overall, India has yet ratified the ILO Conventions on discrimination of labour). India, along forced labour, child labour and non-effective abolition of child labour; and the forms of forced or compulsory labour; the effective recognition of the right to fundamental principles and rights at work, provisions of the ILO Convention. Legislation is in conformity with the Conventions only when India's domestic binding to guide formulation of national through International Labour Standards, Affaris (1979).

The outcome of the ILO's activity is through International Labour Standards, which are contained in Conventions and Recommendations. While ILO Conventions are treaties which are legally binding, ILO Recommendations are non-binding to guide formulation of national policies and measures. India's approach has been to use ILO Recommendations to eventually become party to ILO Conventions only when India's domestic legislation is in conformity with the Conventions and Recommendations. The guiding principle of the ILO is social development and public grievance governance reforms, and village citizens access to information from public Information legislation provides all Indian identity scheme and murders reported. “Availability of data at the national level to ensure comparability”. These are per capita ownership of water, access to all of banking, insurance and financial services by domestic financial institutions, and doubling of agricultural productivity and incomes. The SDG India Report of 2018 revealed that 12 states (Goa, Andhra Pradesh, Gujarat, Telengana, Maharashtra, Arunachal Pradesh, Haryana, Karnataka, Himachal Pradesh, Tamil Nadu, Uttar Pradesh and Mizoram) and five UTs (Daman & Diu, Delhi, Puducherry, Dadra & Nagar Haveli and Chandigarh) were on course to achieve the SDG targets in these areas after three years of India aligning herself with Agenda 2030. The role played by the Prime Minister's Employment Generation Programme (PMEGP), Start-Up India and Village Industrialisation initiatives in this process was highlighted.

While looking at the implementation of SDG 16, the SDG India Report of 2018 takes six indicators, again chosen for “availability of data at the national level to ensure comparability”. These indicators are crimes against children, child density, corruption crime rate, registered births, coverage under the Aadhaar biometric identity scheme scheme, and murder rate. The Report reveals that India’s Constitution provides for justice systems at the local governance level, the Right to information legislation protecting freedom of information, and the citizens’ right to information from public authorities. The Aadhaar system enables governance reforms, and village Panchayats are actively involved in developmental and public grievance redressal issues. Among the states of India, all except 8, and one UT, are on course to achieve the targets of SDG 16. The way forward for India is to achieve Bhair, Madhya Pradesh, Odisha, Assam, and Meghalaya, and Dadar & Nagar Haveli need assistance to implement SDG 18 targets.

In 2018, the UNGA negotiated a Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration to address concerns on the flow of people, including labour. The Compact was the first ever legally binding global framework for a common approach to international migration. In the UN General Assembly, 152 member-states including India voted in favour of the Global Compact, 5 countries including the United States, Czech Republic, Hungary, Israel and Poland opposed it. 12 countries abstained, including Australia, Singapore and New Zealand.

The WTO
When negotiations to create the WTO succeeded in 1995, one important area added to international cooperation on trade in services was under the Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS). Popularly known as the “Mode 4" of "Movement of Natural Persons", this provision enables receiving countries to regulate the entry of skilled labour as service providers. India is generally looked at as the “voice of Mode 4" in WTO negotiations.

The flow of labour across borders through the WTO has sought to be regulated through two broad categories - intra-corporate transferees, which cover the movement of an employee who employed; “economic needs tests” (a test that conditions market access upon the fulfilment of certain economic criteria) or “labour market tests”, generally specified without any indication of the criteria of application: pre-employment conditions; residency and training requirements.

India is one of the major demanders for the opening of global markets for exports of trade in services using Mode 4. India’s experience is the basis for the comparative advantage in exports of Information Technology Enabled Services or IT/ITeS services. India, at the WTO meetings, has been a major proponent of the opening of markets for services in general, both accountancy, medical, architecture, education, management, tourism, culture and the new area of digitally driven services in the area of electronic commerce.

The Way Forward
On 16 September 2019, the UNGA endorsed the ILO’s Centenary resolution, which advocated a “human-centred approach to the future of work, through investing in people, institutions and sustainable growth”. This is the test ahead for India’s labour policies as she adapts and integrates new emerging technologies with her competitive “demographic dividend” in transforming herself into a major world power.

MBA can be pursued by graduates from all disciplines. You might have seen many engineers B.E or B.Tech. going for a management qualification. Even those with an MBBS, or B. Pharm have been doing MBA. So a decision to study management can be planned even while graduating. You don’t need to have it studied earlier. Now it is considered a good idea to have a few years work experience after graduation before you move to a management course. As a matter of fact, many institutes give weightage to students with work experience in admission to such course.

In the United States at most management colleges, post-graduation in business management is open only to experienced graduates. A two-year full time postgraduate diploma in Management carries the same value as MBA. Since all universities are allowed to confer degree, non-universities offer a diploma. However, as per a recent amendment in rules, IIMs which are not considered universities have been permitted to confer degrees.

Five-year integrated course incorporating subject specific graduation and postgraduate qualification in management is available at a handful of institutes. For example, you may find a five-year course covering undergraduate curriculum for engineering and postgraduate curriculum for post-graduate management.

There are short term (11-12 months) part/full-time/weekend courses in management for working people. Before taking up any such course its credentials and value offered needs to be thoroughly examined.

As regards distance learning courses, these are mostly not considered equivalent to a regular course. The need for a two-year full time course is outlined in almost all recruitment advertisements.

The first four are most common specializations. Courses like Masters in Financial Management/Marketing Management / Human Resource Management etc. are also available. Technically there is hardly any difference between MBA (HR) and Masters in Human Resource Management.

It is important to note that not all specializations are available at all the institutes. Due care should be taken in choosing these specializations as they shouldn’t be a random choice. For example if you’re not much comfortable with charts, graphs and calculations, better to choose another specializations than finance. Many a time students fail to find the specialisation with maximum job opportunities and choose specialisation accordingly which is not a healthy practice. More important is to keep your aptitude and interest in mind.

Even for BBA, a few institutes have come up with narrow specialization like Banking, insurance etc.

Entrance tests for management courses: Common Aptitude Test, CAT for short, is the flagship test, conducted all over India. It is usually conducted by various IIMs. However most of the other management institutes also consider CAT score of candidates. Those willing to MBA from other institute will also pursue appear in CAT even if IIM is not on their list. However, in CAT only top scorers in CAT are admitted to IIMs.

All India Management Institute (AIMA), New Delhi conducts a Management Aptitude Test (MAT) which is accepted by a number of institutes in the country. Similarly Association of Indian Management Schools (AIMS) has been conducting ATMA for past many years.

Some state governments (Maharashtra, Telangana, Karnataka, Himachal Pradesh, Odisha, Tamilnadu etc.) conduct entrance examination (ET) for admission to managed institutes in their state. A number of colleges/ universities have their own written examination.

A management entrance examination may consist of Quantitative Technique/ Ability/Aptitude; Analytical/Logical Reasoning, English Language Comprehension, General/Business Scenario Awareness , Data Interpretation etc.

Based on the score in the above candidates are asked for group discussion and personal interview by the institute which has shortlisted them for admission.

Placement to study: IIMs are the most sought after places to study management. IIMs are located at places like Ahmedabad, Bengaluru, Kolkata, Jhnikohde, Indore, Lucknow, Ranchi, Kashipur, Amritsar, Rohtak, Visakhapatnam, Shillong, Tiruchirappalli, Ernakulam, etc. Some of the IITs in addition to engineering, also teach management but with lesser intake. IIT, Mumbai and IIT, Kharagpur are well known for this. You may also check with different centres of Indian Institute of Management which are a few of which have MBA in Data Science/ Business Analytics etc.

Most of the universities in the country, old and new, have a department for management studies.

Private management colleges have mushroomed all over the country, but not all of them are fully equipped to provide quality education. So you’ve to be a bit cautious in your selection. Maximum concentration of such colleges is at Bengaluru, Noida, Pune, Delhi and Hyderabad.

Cost factor: There is wide variation in the fee charged for a management degree across institutions. In some cases it’s indeed exorbitant and difficult to afford by middle and low income families. Though banks are willing to provide you a loan, it needs to be remembered that payment of loan instalments has to begin immediately after your taking up a job or 6 months after completing the course; whichever is earlier. At older institutes the loan can be done at a much less fee and it is a good idea to get into places Faculty of Management Studies, University of Delhi/Banaras Hindu University etc.

Specialized institutes: Given below is an indicative list of some management institutes which are known for their management degree with particular specializations.

- Institute of Rural Management, Anand
- Indian Institute of Foreign Trade, New Delhi
- Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Mumbai
- Tullajpur
- National Institute of Securities Market, Kolkata
- National Institute of Bank Management, Pune
- National Institute of Agricultural Extension Management, Hyderabad (Lauderdale)
- Fellow/Research Programme in Management: IIMs and other institutes like Xavier Labour Relations Institute, Jamshedpur have a fellowship program in management which can be pursued after a postgraduate degree in management. Various other institutes, provided the candidate fulfills other requirements. It is a full time programme, good for those who are academically inclined. Mostly it is a programme with stipend which covers living expenses, cost of books etc. Similarly research opportunities are also available at IIMs, universities etc. leading to a Ph.D. qualification. IIM, Ahmedabad offers Ph.D. in Business policy, Economics, Finance, Information Technology, Organizational behavior, Public system etc.

How a Management qualification helps: As is commonly known management has mainly four functions planning, organizing, directing and controlling. Management courses are designed to teach business theories, models of management, strategic thinking, resource utilization and optimization, funds management, corporate social responsibility, business laws and ethics, corporate governance, managerial styles, delegation, sustainability and creating shareholder value among others. As per current trends more emphasis is being given on developing soft skills in the students and grooming them with leadership training.

Accreditation /Recognition: Universities Grants Commission (UGC) is the regulating authority for universities in India. Many deemed and private universities have been established under state laws or statutes. University affiliated colleges have to strictly follow the MBA curriculum prescribed by the parent university.

All India Council for Technical Education (AICTE) has been established by the government to ensure quality of technical courses being offered in the country. The need for a management course is considered to be a technical course. A postgraduate programme in Management has to be recognized by AICTE to be considered a valid degree for official purposes. Even UGC recognized MBA programmes should ideally have AICTE approval. Though banks are willing to provide you a loan, it needs to be remembered that payment of loan instalments has to begin immediately after your taking up a job or 6 months after completing the course; whichever is earlier. At older institutes the loan can be done at a much less fee and it is a good idea to get into places Faculty of Management Studies, University of Delhi/Banaras Hindu University etc.

Moody’s Investors Service has termed the central government’s decision to cut corporate tax rate as a credit positive move. The rating agency said that the tax cut would give a boost to net income of Indian firms. Speaking to media, Senior Vice President of the Moody’s Investors Service Vikas Halan said, that eventual impact of the corporate tax cut on credit profiles of Indian corporates will hinge on whether they utilise the surplus earnings for reinvestment in the business, debt reduction or high shareholder returns. Moody’s said, the cut in corporate tax is credit positive for companies because it will enable them to generate higher post-tax incomes. The government, slashed the income tax rate for companies by almost 10 percentage points to 25.17 per cent and offered a lower rate to 15.01 per cent for new manufacturing firms to boost economic growth.
